DOCTORS' GOOD-BY TO OSLER.

820 TURN OUT AT DINNER TO THE OXFORD PROFESSOR-ELECT.

Noted Physicians From All Over North America and One at Least From Abroad -Jests About Chloroforming Barred Praise From Canada for the Guest.

The physicians and surgeons of the United States and Canada gave a dinner last night at the Waldorf-Astoria in honor of Dr. William Osler, the diagnostician and writer on medical topics.

Dr. Osler is about to leave this country and Johns Hopkins University, which has been the center of his activities since 1889, to become Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford.

Those who gathered to do him honor last night came from every corner of North America. Some came even farther. Dr. F. Sandwith came all the way from Cairo (Egypt, not Illinois). The dinner was not given under the auspices of any medical society or faction. As nearly as such a gathering of eminent professional men could be, it was spontaneous. Five hundred and twenty men sat down at the tables. The walls of the Astoria's great banquet room were covered with interfolded United States and British flags.

Dr. Osler's family occupied one of the gallery boxes, and the wives and daughters of his hosts filled all the other boxes which surround the room.

In other ways than in the great number In other ways than in the great number of those who participated in it the dinner was remarkable. Physicians are not often found at the banquet tables of the State and county and historical societies. They are too uncertain of their engagement to make many engagements for such frivolities; yet here were 520 non-dinner going

They were fresh at the game; they had a They were fresh at the game; they had a far more tangible and legitimate excuse for their gathering than often comes to the gregarious diner, and they not only rejoiced in the opportunity of letting Dr. Usler know how much they thought of him. but they had a mighty good time among themselves in so doing.

It was announced generally along the table to the transfer of the second of the second tables that any one who made any reference to the chloroforming of persons threatened with senile deterioration would be punished with senile deterioration would be punished at once with a heavy administration of chloroform to the sinner. The souvenirs of the dinner were tiny mortars and pestles (practicable, a theatrical man would have called them), inscribed appropriately.

Dr. Tyson started the speaking at a quarter past 10 o'clock by introducing Dr. F. J. Shepherd of Montreal, who cheer fully recognized the principal incidents of Dr.

recounted the principal incidents of Dr Osler's career at McGill University, when the guest of honor laid the foundations of his reputation. Dr. Shepherd regretted, he said, that he lacked the eloquence which was so common here, but was very rare in the regions farther north. He said that from the tirr He said that from the time when Dr. Osler went to McGill he was distinguished by constant attendance in the post-mortem room and at the hospital, somewhat to the neg-lect of examinations and of other ways of demonstrating his own acquirements; above demonstrating his own acquirements; above all he was distinguished by a sense of humor, a saving sense, said the speaker, in almost everybody, but especially, it had been demonstrated, in Dr. Osler. [Laughter.]

He read a minute of the McGill faculty recording the thanks of the university to William Osler of Dundas, Ont., for the collection of specimens of morbid growths which he gave to the university and still in use there.

Osler, so Dr. Shepherd said amid

Dr. Osler, so Dr. Shepherd sald amid laughter, was not distinguished as a practitioner in Montreal; he had not time to practise; he had no chariot which, was perhaps well, for those who go afoot kill but their tens, where those who go in chariots kill their hundreds. [Laughter.]

The speaker told of a feminine relative who said of Dr. Osler in those days: "Willie is not thinking of matrimony; he is married to his microscope and his children are his lectures." [Laughter.] He said that Dr. Osler had showed his loyalty to McGill by coming back and "making one of those addresses which have made him really famous." [Laughter.]

addresses which have made him really famous." [Laughter.]
Dr. Shepherd concluded by expressing the conviction that Dr. Osler had done much to promote the entente cordiale between Canada and the United States: he was now coming back to his native flag after a mission of helpfulness to a neighbor and friend and the good wishes of MoGill and of all Canada would go with him to Oxford. [Cheers and applause.]
Dr. J. C. Wilson of Philadelphia, who followed Dr. Shepherd, told of the Philadelphia chapter of Dr. Osler's career.

"The test of the true American, it has been said, is the impulse to move on. In the test of the true American, it has been said, is the impulse to move on. In this Dr. Osler is the very type of an American. The further he moves the longer he lives. When he left Philadelphia we had emotions which we couldn't suppress with terrapin, and now that he leaves America we give him the greatest medical dinner. we give him the greatest medical dinner ever told about. "The old world has given to the new many and great physicians. These gifts many and great physicians. These gifts have been returned and to-day Americans can be found in Paris and London. Now to the list is added another imperishable name. Philadelphia is fortunate to have been the home of Franklin and the abiding place of Osler. It is a good thing for us that he came among us, not only because place of Osler. It is a good thing for us that he came among us, not only because of his precepts, but because of his influence; not merely because of his accomplishments and his wisdom, but because he had that indefinable something called character. He is great in little things, and this has ennobled him and has widened his influence so that it has extended to the lands across be that it has extended the seas."

Dr. William H. Welch of Baltimore received a great tribute of affection from the doctors when he got up to tell of Dr. Osler's work at Johns Hopkins. Dr. Welch said it was not for him to dilate upon the received of that work.

Welch said it was not for him to dilate upon the magnitude of that work.

"The results of his great work," he said, "are not to be judged by contemporaries. Undoubtedly the Baltimore period was the most productive in the life of Dr. Osler. He was called to Baltimore by the foundation of Johns Hopkins."

Dr. Welch said that Dr. Osler had determined to have Johns Hopkins a place for young men and that his plan of retaining resident physicians for a number of years, until they became capable and accom-resident physicians for a number of years, or until they became capable and accomplished physicians, was one of his most important contributions to the medical education of this country. Other hospitals, he declared, must in time conform to this idea. Dr. Osler, he said, had not seen fit to get his fame through the newspapers. "But," said he, "it rather looks as though the reporters, no matter what they suffered in the past, have got their revence now."

After all and above all," said Dr. Welch in closing, "it is the qualities of the heart that brings out this inspiring demonstration of our affection and regard for Dr. Osler. of our affection and regard for Dr. Osler.
All that is best in our great profession we commemorate here to-night. We hope to be renewed and strengthened by his frequent returns to us across the Atlantic.
Dr. Osler, our wishes are that your life may continue to be so useful and that your relations with your colleagues on the other side may be as delightful as they were in Amer-

Every one of the doctors got on his feat-when Dr. Welch closed with this and sang a song made up at Johns Hopkins for the occasion to the tune of "My Country, Tis of Thee." One of the verses, which was sung with much gusto, ran thus: "Look at his arteries, Judge of his age by these, Scarce thirty-five! May be ne'er pass his prime in symptom or in sign, Younger in spite of time-Long live our chief!

Dr. Osler as an author and physician was the subject of Dr. A. Jacobi, who also got a great ovation from the medicos. Dr. Jacobi got a lot of laughs when he said that he was glad that the subject of his remarks hadn't passed sixty. He hadn't written so much, either, he said jestingly. In all the medical libraries of the County Medical Association he said, not more than forty medical periodicals bore the name of the guest of the evening "He is responsible," he went on, "for many things which he has never said. There are many things, after all, which he has not written. But our criticism of our guest written. But our criticism of our guest should not all be adverse. I might draw here to-night a picture of a great medical man which all of us might covet. He never forgets the poor in the hospital who have no one to rely upon but their doctors, and his heart goes out to them. At the hedgide one to rely upon but their doctors, and his heart goes out to them. At the bedside or in the ward he is the friend of the sick, or in the ward he is the friend of the sick, aiways kind and genial."

Dr. Jacobi touched on the alleged "Osler theory" only to say that it was the "sensational lie of a penny-a-liner." The statement got a lot of cheers.
The presentation of the copy of Cicero's treatise "De Senectute," printed by Benjamin Franklin, was left to Dr. S. Weir Mitchell. Dr. Mitchell got a great burst of cheers when he got up. He said:
"It is desirable for a man to expire at the proper time."

This quotation from Cicero was loudly There were many cheers for Dr. Osler when he arose to reply. He thanked his hosts for their welcome and their gift, and

"To few men has happiness come in so "To few men has happiness come in so many forms as it has come to me, although I have not deserved it more than others. I have been singularly happy in my friends and in the profession of my choice. I owe it all to you, gentlemen. I have been happy in the people among whom I have worked, both in Canada and my adopted country, to whose grace and nobility of character I bear testimony. I have met with the warmest devotion from my patients and the people.

When I found it was not, another question came up. Philadelphia regards breeding as Boston regards brains. Dr. Mitchell said there was only brains. Dr. Mitchell said there was only one way to determine breeding—to give me a cherry pie and see how I disposed of the somes. I disposed of them discriminatingly, with a spoon, and got the chair.

"My students have been the inspiration of my work and life. BLACK HAND THREATS.

Two Policemen Guarding the House of Dr. Lombardo

Dr. M. Lombardo of 97 Middleton street, Williamsburg, asked Capt. Hollahan of the Clymer street station last night for protection against the Black Hand. Within two weeks, the doctor said, he had received three threatening letters signed with a black hand. The last came vesterday and contained a threat that if $600 were not paid before midnight his house would be blown up with dynamite.

One of the letters instructed him to take a Hamburg avenue car to the terminal at Canarsie and there hand the money to a man who would offer him a cigar. Hollahan endeavored to persuade him to go to Canarsie under the protection of two detectives, but the doctor refused. Two olicemen were detailed to keep watch over

HEARST BUYS "COSMOPOLITAN"? Report That John Brisben Walker Has Sold His Magazine.

John Brisben Walker, it was said on good authority yesterday, has sold the Cosmopolitan Magazine to William R. Hearst. The price paid was not learned, but it was said that Mr. Walker would continue to manage the magazine for five years. Mr. Hearst sailed for Europe yesterday.

The pressure remained high yesterday over Middle Atlantic and New England States, where the weather was fair. This high area was gradually moving eastward and an area of low pressure from the Central Western States was coming on, attended by threatening conditions and rain. There was a general but not a very great rise of temperature.

In this city the day was fair, slightly cooler in the morning and slightly warmer is the afternoon: wind, fresh southeasterly: average humidity, 52 per cent.; barometer, corrected to read to sea level, at 8 A. M., 30.26; at 8 P. M., 30.21.

The temperature yesterday, as recorded by the official thermometer, is shown in the annexed table:

WASHINGTON FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW. For eastern New York, partly cloudy and warmer ady; fair on the coast, rain in the interior to morous; increasing south winds.

For New England, fair and warmer to-day; fair except rain in northwest portion to morrow; fresh ith winds. the District of Columbia, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, fair and warner to-day; in-ereasing cloudiness to morrow; fresh south winds. For eastern Pennsylvania, fair to-day, warmer in east portion; wain to-morrow, colder in north portion; fresh to brisk south winds. For western New York, rain to-day and to-mor-

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

In the enrolment of the 180 Chinese gamblers rounded up by Capt. Eggers in his Easter Sunday raid the name "Ah" appeared so often as to suggest that the Ah family is as large as the Lees in New York. It was merely a little ruse of the wily heathen to escape identification. In Chinese nomenclature the family name "Jones John" and not "John Jones" is the order. "Ah" is merely a diminutive. Therefore, a Chinaman who doesn't want to give his real name, and is yet afraid of giving a name wholly false, will tack the diminutive on his given name. Thus Sam Sing becomes "Ah Sing," Lee Yow "Ah Yow," and the like.

The postal clerks, a long suffering group of civil servants, have another kick coming. It arises from the persistent effort of the magazine advertisers to enlist the buying public as Pinkertons to determine the value of the different periodicals as advertising mediums. The beginnings were very simple, a polite request to "mention this magazine" in ordering. But the people neglected the mention. The next step was a suggestion to clip the advertisement and send it with the order. Even at that the public failed to see that it had any concern in the value of any particular medium to the advertiser. The next stage was the keyed "ad." If you saw the "ad" in one magazine you were directed to ask for Catalogue D, which in another magazine was Catalogue E, and so on through the alphabet. Still the insensate public wrote for its catalogues without any regard for the key and the advertiser had no way of finding out from what magazine his new business was coming. Now the advertiser has won. He puts his key in the street number of his address, as may be seen by comparing the same advertisement in the different magazines. By that means the advertiser can compel the buyer to do his detective work for him. But it is hard on the postal clerks and the mail carriers, whose duty it is to see that each of these carefully misdirected letters reaches its destination. was the keyed "ad." If you saw the 'ad' letters reaches its destination.

The family had moved on May 1 from an old fashioned house into one with modern improvements. In the new house there is a swinging door between the dining room and kitchen. It was a new thing to the servant, who had been with the family for more than twenty years. On moving day it didn't bother her, as it was braced open toward the dining room. When she came down the next morning she was obliged to pass through the dining room to get to the kitchen. She felt for the handle of the door. Then, not finding any, she pried it toward her with a knife and passed through. She knows better now.

The big magnolia trees in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, are now in full bloom, and loaded heavily with pink blossoms. Nothing in the park brings more admirers than these trees. The steeplejack is not the only workman who needs a steady nerve. The other day a big safe was being hoisted to the tenth story of a building and was well up when the ropes stuck in the pulley. Before the safe could be moved it was necessary for a man to climb up the rope, hand over hand, like a monkey, with the safe hanging over him. A crowd stood breathless watch-ing him. When at last he slid down the crowd said "Ah!" in unison and breathed freely again.

The man himself thought nothing of it.

"One of the risks of the business," he said, as he took hold of the rope and helped the others hoist the safe.

That necessity is the mother of invention is nowhere proved more conclusively than in the furniture which is designed for the modern flat. HICKEY'S FLAT TOPSY-TURVY AFTER WIFE'S VISIT. Cuffs Waved as Banners on the Walls, With Cutting Legends-Far Too Much Beet on the Dumbwaiter-12 Hours Superfluous Gas Bill-Separation Suit On. John M. Hickey, who has spent forty rears in managing road shows and is now a real estate broker at 1432 Broadway, has a wife, who, before he married her, was Miss Ray Alexander, an actress. They have been married eight years. Up to Feb. 3 they occupied a flat at 231 West 141st street. On that date, as Mr. Hickey related in the Harlem police court yesterday, Mrs. Hickey left the flat and has since been living with her sister. Mr. Hickey continued to keep house with his daughter. Recently he got his lawyer, Robert L. Turk, to bring a suit for separation against Mrs. Hickey in the Supreme Court, charging abandonment.

The suit is pending. Mr. Hickey says that subsequently Mrs. Hickey made several requests of him for some of the furniture, alleging that it belonged to her. He told her that she could have it on May 1, when he proposed to vacate the flat. Mrs. Hickey seemingly consented, he says. Mr. Hickey's daughter went out of town on a visit last week. On Wednesday, ac cording to the sad story told in court, Mr. Hickey, after dining at a chophouse, turned toward his lonely Harlem flat. It was 11 o'clock when he arrived there. When he got out of the elevator he noticed that the doormat was gone. When he opened the door he found every gasjet burning brightly. There are twelve jets in the Hickey flat. Subsequent investigation disclosed the fact that they had been burning twelve hours. Mr. Hickey next discovered that the floors were bare of carpets, that some chairs were overturned and that on the floor lay most of the pictures and bric-à-brac that had made the flat seem like home. A brass bed in which he had expected to sleep was gone.

Glancing toward the parlor mantel, he found several of his clean cuffs pinned to the woodwork. Opposite, on another wall, were more of his cuffs. They were all over the flat. Mr. Hickey tore off a cuff. On t, written in pencil in a well known hand says, was this legend.

"Me for liberty, you for hell." He tore off another.

You can chase yourself." it read. Another and another cuff came down om the wall. Hickey could not read ome of them, because they were in French. He made his way toward the kitchen. On his way he passed the bathroom. It was brilliantly lighted, like the other rooms. The sound of dripping water broke on his ears. Floating near the top of the tub. as Hickey described it, was his new light nummer suit. Other articles of his ward-obe, including some fancy vests, were inned down at the bottom by the weight of some rugs. He stirred up the mass and some wilted collars and cuffs floated into view.

The dining room table and the sideboard were still there, but on them were a lot of broken dishes. Again the sound of running water came to his ears. It was in the kitchen. In the sink, well that had held his stock of maraschino, claret and sherry. Dishes and dishpans littered the floor. He picked his way over them to the parlor, found that a couch was left and went to sleep on it.

Mr. Hickey says that he doesn't know how long he had been asleep when he beard the whistle of the dumbwaiter. He found it was morning and he tore down the hall. When he opened the door of the dumbwaiter shaft what seemed to be the carcass of a Western steer met his eye. He yelled down the shaft and found that it was 100 pounds of beef ordered the day before.

down the shaft and found that it was 100 pounds of beef ordered the day before. Mr. Hickey sent the waiter down. He told the man to take back the beef; that somebody had put up a joke on him. Several times, Hickey said, the whistle blew again. Each time he found the dumbwaiter groaning under the large quantities of groveries and other household supplies. oceries and other house of groceries and other household supplies. Each time he sent the waiter down with a hang. Some of the tradesmen, Hickey said, came to the door and said that the stuff had been ordered for a big party. Hickey fled from the flat. He got the janitor and the police.

The janitor told the police and told Hickey that his wife had visited the flat on Wednesday morning with her brother. While Mrs. Hickey stood in the hall, he said, the brother had climbed the fire escape to the fourth floor and got into the flat through an open window. Then he let Mrs. Hickey in. and out went the bed, carpets and some chairs.

Hickey went to the Harlem court and got out a summons for Louis Alexander, Mrs. Hickey's brother. He appeared in court yesterday and so did Mrs. Hickey, a tall, middleaged woman. Mr. Hickey was accompanied by his lawyer and by the janitor. He charged the brother with malicious mischief, breaking into his flat, and larceny. He didn't charge Mrs. Hickey with anything. In support of his charge he told his story, and he had the janitor tell his. Mrs. Hickey admitted entering the flat and taking some of the furniture, which, she said belonged to her. She also admitted ninning messages on cuffs around the flat. She wouldn't admit that she had broken anything, or that her brother had, nor that they had put Hickey's clothes "in soak."

"This man is my husband," said Mrs. Hickey, and the flat is my home, and I had a perfect right to enter it and do what I pleased there."

Magistrate Breen said that, in view of Magistrate Breen said that, in view of Magistrate Breen said that, in view of the separation suit, he wouldn't interfere. He exacted a promise from Mrs. Hickey, however, that she would not annoy Mr. Hickey. Mrs. Hickey swept out of the courtroom with a triumphant air. Hickey said yesterdsy that the separation suit would be fought to a finish. He has moved out what things he had left, and is now living at the Greenroom Club.

BILL TO DECAPITATE COMR. KEATING PROMPTLY APPEARS.

Made the Port Warden Take Out an Employment Agency License-One Witness Against March Disappears and Another Applies for Pistol Permit.

"I won't get any license. I'll have the damned law repealed anyway, and quick at that. Odell will do that for me. I deiver all the Republican Italian votes in this city and you can go to hell. You won't hold your job long, either." Thus, according to Frederick L. C. Keating, Commissioner of Licenses, did Port Warden James E. March, Republican leader of the Sixth Assembly district, address him when the Commissioner notified Mr. March, who supplies laborers to railroads, that he would have to take out a license or quit business. Then the Commissioner had him arrested, and he promised to take out a license if the charge against him was dropped.

But apparently he did not forget hi threat to shorten Mr. Keating's term of office. Yesterday Senator Armstrong of Rochester, an Aldridge-Odell statesman, introduced at Albany a bill to amend the employment agency law by taking the power of appointing the head of the department away from the Mayor and turning the appointment over to the State Comnissioner of Labor, who is a Republican. This bill, it is said, was taken to Albany ast week by William Halpin, Odell's repre sentative here. If it passes, Mr. Keating, f course, will lose his job. The patronage of the department amounts to about $49,000 a year, but most of the employees are in the classified service, and thus safe from slaughter. Mr. Keating's salary is $5,000. Recently the Italian detective who got he evidence against March for the License Department applied to Commissioner McAdoo for permission to carry a revolver He said his life had been threatened time and again since March was arrested. His partner who helped him to get the evidence disappeared several weeks ago and no trace of him has been found.

CIRCUS BARONESS BREAKS DOWN. Attache of Austrian Embassy Visits Her

-Part of Stolen Property Recovered. Washington, May 2 .- Alice Densen former employee of Mrs. William Slater of this city, who was brought here last night from New York to answer a charge of having stoler, articles valued at $150 from Mrs. later, became hysterical at the House Slater, became hysterical at the House of Detention to-day and had to be taken to the Emergency Hospital. An attaché of the Austrian Embassy called on her there. On the blotter at police headquarters her name is given as Amanda von Dowitz. The police are inclined to believe the story of her husband and herself that he is Baron De Vir of Austria. She had gone to work De Vitz of Austria. She had gone to work as a circus equestrienne when arrested in

New York.
Some of the stolen property has been recovered by Mrs. Eliza Bull, Mrs. Slater's housekeeper, and the accused woman's husband, it is asserted, promised to return the rest from New York to-day. Should restitution be made of all stolen property, the complaint will be withdrawn.

MANY ELLIS ISLAND BIDS. A Host Want to Feed the Immigrants. Immigration Sargent, has been received at the Department of Commerce and Labor exchange and feeding privileges at the Ellis Island immigrant station.

The bids are to be opened to-morrow.

New York banks, it is said, have awakened to the value of the money changing contracts and many well known houses are expected to be bidders.

The privilege of feeding the immigration privileges were so valuable.

Representatives of many New York express companies are here to-night, and practically every concern of that kind in New York is likely to be a bidder for the privilege which is now held by the Westcott Express Company.

As the awards will not be necessarily to the lowest bidde, nothing can be positively determined from the figures of the bids which will be opened to-morrow, morning in Mr. Sargent's office. Secretary Metcalf will make the awards on the Commissioner-General's recommendation. Commissioner-General's recommendation, and in case of appeal the President will
